Iraq Draft Done, but No Vote

Three-day delay approved; Sunni support still in doubt

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | In another dramatic last-minute standoff, Iraqi leaders put off a vote on a draft constitution late Monday, adjourning parliament at a midnight deadline in a bid for three more days to win over the Sunni Arab minority whose support is key to stopping the insurgency.

The Shiite-Kurdish bloc that submitted the draft constitution expressed optimism that a deal was still possible within a few days. But top Sunni Arab leaders said flatly that compromise was far off.

U.S. Ambassador Zalmay Khalilzad said the major issues blocking a deal were federalism, purging the Baath Party and the issue of whether some of the officers of the assembly should be elected by majority or two-thirds.

But Saleh al-Mutlaq, one of four top Sunni Arab negotiators, said more than 20 issues still divide the sides.

"This constitution is full of land mines that would explode on Iraqis," al-Mutlaq said. "This constitution will divide the country."

The remaining issues referred to by al-Mutlaq cast doubt whether the Iraqis would be able to finish the document quickly since the various groups have widely differing positions. Repeated delays are a deep embarrassment for the Bush administration at a time of growing doubts within the United States over the mission in Iraq. QASSIM ABDUL-ZAHRA (AP)

INNOCENCE | Eat and Stun An Aurora, Colo., man who, in February, was fired on with a Taser gun after being accused of stealing salad from a Chuck E. Cheese's restaurant, has settled with the city. Danon Gale used the wrong plate at the salad bar and employees accused him of trying to eat without paying. Police used a Taser stun gun on Gale, in front of his children, after he wouldn't provide a receipt; an investigation concluded Gale did pay for the salad. The city blamed the restaurant. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

REVERSE

Full Speed Behind

Jim Peterson was 80 miles off the coast of Newport, Ore., on Aug. 13 when his boat's reverse gear seized up on him. After some frustration, Peterson managed to get the 38-foot vessel to shift into reverse. But only reverse. Far from his home, Peterson and the deckhand, Jeremy Welsh, considered their options — wait hours for a Coast Guard tow, wait for help from other fishermen or drive the boat all the way back in reverse. Peterson wasn't waiting. The 60-year-old woodentroll-er is difficult to steer in reverse and goes less than seven miles an hour in that gear — meaning it was a 39-hour trip home. (AP)

Adapting Lassie to Today's Technology

A Lake Parsippany, N.J., woman who has been charged with making prank phone calls to police earlier this month said her dog is responsible, the Daily Record reported. Sylvia D'Antonio said she was teaching "Slayer," to dial 911 in case anything ever happened to her, and the dog knocked the phone off the hook and stepped on the numbers. But a concerned dispatcher, who said three calls from D'Antonio's house were made in which the only sound was someone breathing, sent police rushing to the scene. (EXPRESS)

All's Fair in Love And Stupidity

A Bangkok man hoping to win a woman's heart by getting her lover out of the picture phoned in a fake bomb threat, reporting that his rival was about to detonate explosives, police said.

Thanee Boonsiri allegedly called the police emergency center and told them he was a defected separatist from the troubled south of the country. Thanee said a supposed "friend," still active in the insurgency, was about to detonate bombs planted in several major buildings, police said; Thanee then gave authorities his rival's mobile phone number. Thanee was arrested Friday and is in custody pending a trial. (AP)

Bush Defends Iraq War Strategy

Calls conflict a necessary part of war on terror

SALT LAKE CITY | President Bush compared the fight against terrorism to both world wars and other conflicts of the 20th century as he tried to reassure an increasingly skeptical public on Monday to support U.S. military involvement in Iraq.

With the anti-war movement finding new momentum behind grieving mother Cindy Sheehan, Bush acknowledged the fighting in Iraq is difficult and dangerous. But he told the Veterans of Foreign Wars national convention the fight is necessary to keep terrorists out of the United States.

As he did in last year's election campaign and more recently as war opposition has risen, Bush reminded his listeners of the terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001 — reciting the date five times in a 30-minute speech.

"We're not yet safe," Bush said. "Terrorists in foreign lands still hope to attack our country. They still hope to kill our citizens. The lesson of Sept. 11, 2001, is that we must confront threats before they fully materialize."

Bush's arguments for war were not new, but they were his first public statements on the war since his national security and defense advisers visited his Texas ranch on Aug. 11.

Courting Public Opinion

→ Advisers say Bush's address sought to convince a "broader audience in the country" that he "recognizes ... the sacrifices that are being made." | Today, A Section

IN The Washington Post

Since then, the limelight had shifted to protesters asking that he bring the troops home immediately.

Bush didn't mention the protesters in his speech, but he spoke of the grief carried by the families of fallen soldiers. He said Americans owe it to the war dead to finish the task they gave their lives for.

Despite Advances, Fight Looms Over Stem Cells

WASHINGTON | Stem cell science may be advancing, but not fast or far enough to break a standoff between President Bush and Congress over federal funding for research that destroys human embryos.

Clear majorities exist in the House and Senate for a bill to loosen Bush's 2001 restrictions on public funding for embryonic stem cell research. Bush, opposed to the creation and destruction of human embryos for research, has promised to veto the bill if it reaches his desk.

Monday's announcement that

Harvard scientists had discovered a way to fuse adult skin cells with embryonic stem cells raised the possibility that someday, all-purpose stem cells could be created without harming human embryos.

Someday. But not soon enough to change the outcome of an emotional debate looming after Congress' August recess. Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist's office said Monday a vote on the bill will still take place in September despite the scientists' announcement and pleas by conservatives to delay the vote. (AP)

Apology for Olympics Blast

Bomber Eric Rudolph contrite, sentenced to life for 1996 bombing

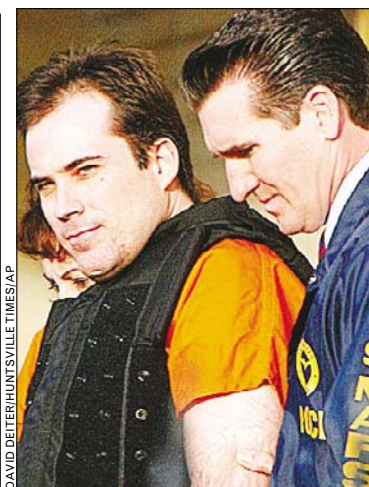

ATLANTA | Nearly nine years after setting off the bomb that disrupted the 1996 Summer Olympics, Eric Rudolph was sentenced to four life terms in prison Monday at a hearing in which victims described him as a cowardly terrorist.

"Like other small men who act as you have acted, you have a Napoleonic complex and need to compensate for what you lack," said John Hawthorne, whose wife, Alice, died in the Olympics bombing. More than 100 others were injured.

Rudolph, 38, clean-shaven and gaunt, apologized for the Olympics bombing, saying he "would do anything to take that night back."

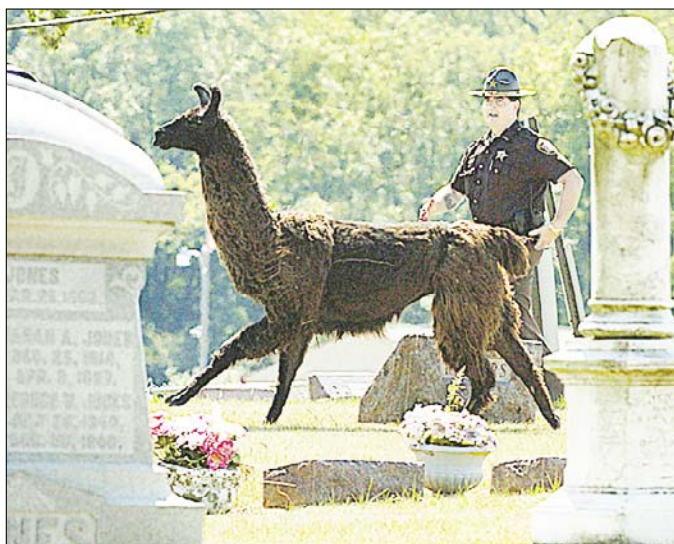

He pleaded guilty earlier this year and was sentenced last month to life for the 1998 bombing of a women's clinic in Alabama that killed a police officer and maimed a nurse. Monday's hearing covered the Olympics blast, a bombing at a gay nightclub in Atlanta and another at an abortion clinic in the city in 1997.

He had faced a possible death sentence, but reached a plea deal with prosecutors in exchange for him revealing the location of more than 250 pounds of stolen dynamite he had buried in North Carolina. (AP)

Conn. Sues Over School Reform Law

'No Child Left Behind' rule makes states foot the bill, lawsuit says

HARTFORD, CONN. | Connecticut on Monday became the first state to challenge the No Child Left Behind law in court, arguing that the centerpiece of President Bush's education law amounts to an unfunded mandate from the federal government.

"Our message today is give up the unfunded mandates, or give us the money," said Attorney General Richard Blumenthal.

The lawsuit raises the stakes in a heated fight between states and the Bush administration over the law, and experts say Legislatures around the country will be watching the case carefully. Experts expect that states could vote to join the lawsuit or file their own.

The lawsuit argues that No Child Left Behind is illegal because it requires expensive standardized tests and other school programs that the government doesn't pay for. It asks a federal judge to declare that state and local money cannot be used to meet the law's goals. (AP)

Last of Jewish Settlers Leave Gaza

Troops positioned for Israeli settlement pullout in West Bank

NETZARIM, GAZA STRIP | The last Israeli settlers in the Gaza Strip staged a tearful farewell procession past deserted homes, then left in convoys of armored buses for Israel, ending a turbulent decades-old presence that critics have long denounced as a stumbling block to Mideast peace.

The historic pullout prompted Palestinian leader Mahmoud Abbas to telephone Prime Minister Ariel Sharon for a five-minute conversation — their first in two months — in which they mutually pledged to continue peace efforts, Israeli and Palestinian officials said.

In the West Bank, thousands of troops surrounded two small settlements where some 2,000 extremists have holed up with an arsenal of stun grenades, gas canisters and automatic weapons, defying orders to leave. Troops were due to move into the settlements at dawn Tuesday, in the riskiest operation yet of Sharon's plan to "disengage" from the Palestinians.

In the final day of the evacuation of Israeli civilians from Gaza, dozens of Netzarim's families prayed in the community's synagogue, weeping without control as the Torah scrolls were taken from their ark for the last time. ## Blackout Halts Iraqi Oil Exports

Power loss blamed on insurgent sabotage shakes edgy markets

DUBAI, UNITED ARAB EMIRATES | Saboteurs triggered a cascade of blackouts that halted Iraq's entire oil export capacity for most of Monday, a move that cost the country almost $60 million in lost exports and rattled already jittery world markets.

Government officials blamed the outage on insurgent attacks that toppled key power pylons in central Iraq and darkened broad swaths of the country, including Baghdad and Basra.

By late Monday, tankers were being loaded at less than a third of normal capacity with the help of backup generators, Dow Jones Newswires reported.

Analysts said the disruption — a brief one by the standards of postwar Iraq — wasn't likely to affect world oil prices, especially with demand in North America expected to contract as the summer driving season ends.

With most producers already pumping flat-out, analysts said a dry day in Iraq could still shove prices up. JIM KRANE (AP)

Brazilian Officials Probe U.K. Shooting

LONDON | Two top Brazilian officials met with London police Monday to learn more about the probe into the killing of a Brazilian man police mistook for a suicide bomber.

Pressure has mounted on London's Metropolitan Police and its commissioner, Ian Blair, over allegations of serious failings in the lead-up to Jean Charles de Menezes' death on a subway train. Police shot the electrician July 22, at a time of

Suspect Arrested In Rocket Attack

AMMAN, JORDAN | A Syrian linked to an Iraqi-based terrorist group has been arrested as the prime suspect in the rocket attack that barely missed U.S. warships docked in the port of Aqaba, the Jordanian government said Monday.

The government statement, read on state television, said the suspect, Mohammed Hassan Abdullah al-Sihly, plotted and carried out the attack along with two of his sons and an Iraqi.

The statement said the plotters were part of an Iraq-based terrorist group, which was not named.

Al-Sihly had been surveying sites for the attack in Aqaba since Aug. 6, the statement said. He was joined by his two sons and Mohammed Hamid Hussein, the Iraqi, in "carrying out the heinous crime," in which three Katyusha rockets were fired from a hill above Aqaba. (AP)

Corruption Allegations Stir Brazil

Silva issues defense of finance minister as bribery scandal grows

SAO PAULO, BRAZIL | Brazil's president defended his finance minister Monday, mounting a damage-control effort to head off a growing corruption scandal in South America's largest economy.

President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva used his biweekly radio address to praise Finance Minister Antonio Palocci as an "innocent person" who has been unfairly targeted by accusations he took bribes from a trash hauler while he was a mayor of a city in Sao Paulo state.

Silva's defense of Palocci came a day after the finance minister rejected the allegations in a rare Sunday press conference.

The corruption scandal has been going on for three months, with Silva buffeted by allegations his Workers Party paid bribes to opposition congressmen to buy votes and operated a multimillion-dollar campaign slush fund. (AP)

'Mayday' Call in Jet Crash

Greek probe reveals flight attendant tried to get help, steer plane

ATHENS, GREECE | Two seconds before impact, the last man conscious in the cockpit of a doomed Cypriot airliner made a desperate call for help — "Mayday, Mayday" — before the plane carrying 121 people smashed into a mountain near Athens.

Chief investigator Akrivos

Tsolakis told The Associated Press on Monday that the man — believed to be a flight attendant with pilot training — twice issued distress calls in the final 10 minutes of Helios Airways Flight 522.

Earlier Monday, Tsolakis issued a preliminary report on the Aug. 14 crash which killed all 115 passengers and six crew.

It said the Boeing 737-300 had lost cabin pressure and eventually ran out of fuel. A man wearing an oxygen mask, believed to be 25-year-old Andreas Prodromou, tried to steer the plane for the last 10 minutes.

In his first appeal, he cried "Mayday" three times — but the plane's communications had apparently been set to the wrong frequency, Tsolakis said.

Greek investigators, aided by the U.S. National Transportation Safety Board, are continuing to probe the tragedy, the worst ever in Greece and considered one of the most baffling in aviation history. BRIAN CHURCH (AP)

Northwest Weathers Strike

Airline flies busiest day since mechanics decided to walk off job

MINNEAPOLIS | Business travelers got their first taste of a strike at Northwest Airlines on Monday as the nation's fourth-largest carrier flew its busiest day since mechanics walked off the job.

Operations were largely normal, although industry observers said the airline saw more delays and cancellations than usual on a typical weekday.

Northwest has refused to release statistics on delays or cancellations since the strike began. At midday Monday, a check of the airline's video screens at its Detroit hub showed delays for 23 out of 120 departures — about normal.

Some 4,400 Northwest unionized mechanics, cleaners and custodians walked off the job Saturday morning.

No new talks are scheduled between Northwest and the union, which is refusing to take pay cuts and layoffs that would have reduced their ranks by nearly half.

Northwest spent 18 months preparing for the strike, arranging for about 1,900 replacement workers and managers. JOSHUA FREED (AP)

Fundraising for MLK Memorial Gains Steam

WASHINGTON | Backers of a permanent National Mall memorial to Martin Luther King Jr. said Monday they are more than a third of the way toward their $100 million fundraising goal.

"He is the foundation and the moral compass for our youth," said Sheila Johnson, owner of the WNBA's Washington Mystics, announcing plans to give $1 million on behalf of her two children.

Johnson was among several Martin Luther King Memorial Foundation leaders gathered on the Tidal Basin to launch the Kids for King campaign. An essay contest begins Wednesday, and 12 winners will attend the September 2006 groundbreaking on a four-acre site not far from the Lincoln Memorial, where King made his famous 1963 speech, "I Have a Dream."

With $39.5 million now committed, officials hope to raise another $27 million by the groundbreaking. They hope to have $100 million when the civil rights leader's memorial opens in 2008.

Since Congress authorized the project in 1996, most fundraising has focused on corporations.

"King's advocacy of nonviolent change is even more important today," said Gary Cowger, a vice president of General Motors, which has donated $10 million. Board members are hoping publicity generated by donations from GM, Tommy Hilfiger USA, Time Warner, the NBA and the Washington Redskins will prompt more support from celebrities whose popularity is an indirect legacy of the civil rights movement.

Muhammad Taken to Md.

Convicted by Va. jury, sniper back in county where shooting began

BOYDS, MD. | Nearly three years after they were arrested at a western Maryland highway rest stop for the Washington area sniper shootings, John Allen Muhammad and Lee Boyd Malvo were back together Monday in the county where the murders began.

Montgomery County sheriff's deputies picked up Muhammad, 44, from his death row cell in Waverly, Va., and drove him before dawn to the Montgomery Correctional Facility. Already housed there is Malvo, 20, his co-defendant in a pending Maryland trial on six counts of first-degree murder.

John Allen Muhammad wasn't very cooperative at his Maryland booking.

Muhammad and Malvo, who once shared a beat-up Chevrolet Caprice as they roamed through out the Washington region in October 2002, were held separately at the jail.

Malvo was transferred to the jail in May, but Muhammad had fought his extradition to Maryland. A Virginia judge ordered him sent to Montgomery on Friday.

Muhammad was uncooperative at his booking, according to Deputy Chief Darren Popkin of the Montgomery County sheriff's office. Muhammad refused to be photographed or give fingerprints. In his mug shot, he casts his head down, his eyes away from the camera.

Muhammad will be represented by the public defender's office.

In all, the two are accused of killing 10 people and wounding three in the region during the spree.

Norton: Teachers Aren't All to Blame

WASHINGTON | Parents, community leaders and members of Congress should be held as accountable as teachers for improving the city's schools, Del. Eleanor Holmes Norton told principals Monday.

Norton, D-D.C., spoke to school leaders during the first annual superintendent's conference at Gallaudet University, one week before classes begin in the D.C. Public Schools. The system hired 45 new principals over the summer, changing the leadership at nearly a third of the schools.

"When we say the buck stops here, we're talking about you," Norton told the principals.

"It's time to ask what the rest of us are prepared to do," Norton said, citing what she called a $40 billion shortfall in federal education funding. "It's time to do something besides criticize the schools for what they're not doing."

Sticking to a workout after an injury is both possible and helpful

INJURIES | When David Scoggin discovered that the popping sensation he had felt while playing flag football was a complete tear of his Achilles tendon, he feared it meant being sidelined from workouts for a while.

But after working out with a personal trainer, Scoggin, 32, found he could still do a lot, even cardiovascular exercises.

As most professional athletes know, an injury doesn't have to mean the end of a workout program. But even though many exercisers dread the loss of the strength, cardio and weight-loss benefits they've achieved, some think they can't or shouldn't do any exercise while injured, and they stop everything until the injury heals.

But maintaining an exercise regimen (if modified properly) has both physical and mental benefits.

Sometimes low-impact exercises can even assist the healing, as is the case with some tears of the anterior cruciate ligament in the knee. For those injuries, "you want to maintain the range of motion, strength and function of the lower extremities," said Dr. Peter Kurzweil, an orthopedic surgeon at the Southern California Center for Sports Medicine.

Even when a limb is incapacitated by a cast, the other arm or leg

Injuries don't have to stop exercise.

can be worked out solo. There's a crossover effect in doing this, says Kurzweil; while exercising the good limb, the muscles of the other one get a bit of a workout, too (one theory is that the dual effect is controlled by the central nervous system).

Athletic coaches often keep injured athletes involved in training and competition, even if it's performing simple tasks, so players can still feel part of the team. That principle can be applied to non-athletes as well, said Fabio Comana, certification and exam development manager for the American Council on Exercise. By staying involved on some level, "you can really streamline the return to activity."

New machines and revised rules make CPR more effective

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation is crucial when people collapse with cardiac arrest, but it's hard to perform correctly. Now major efforts are under way to improve how doctors, paramedics and average bystanders do the job: New CPR guidelines are due this fall, and high-tech machines that promise to help are already showing up in ambulances and offices.

Portable defibrillators can increase survival, delivering a jolt of electricity that stuns the heart, ending the abnormal rhythm and giving it a chance to resume a normal beat.

But the heart-zappers alone aren't enough. Virtually all cardiac-arrest victims need CPR, too. It buys time until a defibrillator arrives. Often, it's needed immediately after zapping, as the heart struggles to resume circulation.

But "it has to be good CPR. We don't want to delay defibrillation for crummy CPR," warned Dr. Lance Becker of the University of Chicago, co-author of a pair of surprising studies earlier this year that found even the best-trained rescuers too frequently give inadequate CPR.

Enter the high-tech machines: Philips Medical Systems is seeking Food and Drug Administration clearance of a CPR-aiding defibrillator with sensor pads that measure chest compressions. And more than 100 fire departments and other first responders have bought Zoll's AutoPulse, a battery-powered band that squeezes the chest to replace manual compressions.

The technology's intriguing, but no machine yet has proven better than manual CPR. New international guidelines due in November aim to teach rescuers to do CPR better. LAURAN NEERGAARD (AP)

Redskins' Nemo Looks Like a Find

Rookie running back from Citadel makes an impression in camp

REDSKINS | Earnest Byner was responsible for finding Nemo.

The Washington Redskins running backs coach tracked him down early this year, at a school that had gone 10 years without having a player taken in the NFL draft. Byner went to see a running back named Nehemiah Broughton work out at The Citadel, and any thoughts about a fish movie were quickly supplanted by an unexpected flashback.

"People think it's crazy — I'm not going to compare him to this guy — but what I felt with him at that workout was similar to something I felt with Jamal when I was with Baltimore," Byner said. "When he ran past me, the thought of Jamal came to me, just like that."

A player from The Citadel? Similar to Jamal Lewis? That's a hard sell, but Byner reported his findings and made his case to the scouts and coaching staff. On draft day, with their last pick, the Redskins took Byner's advice and chose Broughton in the seventh round with the 222nd overall pick.

"I always believed it could happen," Broughton said. "But I also know the chances were very slim when you're coming from The Citadel and making it this far."

Broughton got his nickname as a freshman in college, long before anyone had heard of the movie "Finding Nemo." He was originally called "Nemo-sapien" because one of his teammates thought Broughton was a different breed of player.

With the Redskins, he's been an unmistakable presence playing with the second unit during training camp and the first two exhibition games. He has not only lowered his shoulder to pop would-be tacklers, he has been effective as a receiver, catching five passes for 45 yards in Friday night's loss to Cincinnati. His only major miscue was a fumble in the fourth quarter, but by then he had built up plenty of goodwill among the coaching staff.

"He's a little bit quicker than what you think, a little bit faster, and his feet a little bit better, and he's strong," Byner said. "Nemo's smart. What he's showing me he can do is coach himself."

Heap Out Friday, but Plans to Face Redskins

Pro Bowl tight end is activated to practice after battling injuries

RAVENS | Baltimore Ravens tight end Todd Heap will not play in the team's preseason game Friday in New Orleans.

The two-time Pro Bowl pick, slowed by ankle and shoulder surgeries, did not participate in any training camp practices, but he will be on the field this week at the team's training facility and could be ready for the Ravens' final preseason contest Sept. 1 against the visiting Washington Redskins.

"It felt good to be out there with the guys," Heap said Monday afternoon after being activated from the physically unable to perform list. "It's about time to get back into it. I've been working really hard to get my body back healthy and it's about time."

Heap missed nine weeks last season with an ankle injury, but upon his return, he registered 15 of his 27 receptions for the year, as well as all three of his touchdowns. (AP)

Giants' Manning to Sit Out Exhibition

FOOTBALL | Eli Manning will miss the New York Giants' preseason game against the New York Jets on Friday with a sprained elbow, but said that the injury might not prevent him from playing in a regular season game.

The Giants' quarterback was examined Monday morning by Dr. Russell Warren, the team doctor, who confirmed he had a sprain and bruise on the inside of his right elbow. Coach Tom Coughlin said Manning's status is "week to week."

The injury occurred Saturday night in the first half of the Giants' 27-21 win over Carolina when Julius Peppers stripped Manning of the ball, recovered it and returned it for a touchdown. Manning remained in the game and threw a 41-yard touchdown pass to Amani Toomer despite the injury.

Manning said that since it is the preseason he will not throw this week and will see how the elbow feels next week before attempting to resume practicing. DAVID PORTER (AP)

Time for MLS to Represent

Soccer | It was not until last Friday that Major League Soccer revealed the team that would represent it in this afternoon's high-profile exhibition against nine-time European champion Real Madrid. Although the game represents a chance to garner some meaningful experience and exposure, MLS teams were reluctant to part with their better players during a crucial part of the season.

So a tug-of-war ensued, as each club looked out for its own interests.

When the dust settled it was decided that forward Jaime Moreno and goalkeeper Nick Rimando would fly

Dolly Parton: 'Those Were the Days'

One of our greatest songwriters and an all-around dilly of a gal, Miss Dolly Parton will showcase songs from her new album, filled with '70s rock and folk hits.

Constitution Hall, 1776 D St. NW; with Last Train Home, 8 p.m., $55-$75; 800-551-7328.

Country, bluegrass and now folk and rock star Dolly does it all with style.

Bard-37: 'And Then Is Heard No More'

Whew! The grueling Our Canon Cabaret project — staged readings of the complete works of Shakespeare in chronological order — bows out for the season with "Henry VIII."

Revealing Patterns

Everything old is new again in fall's pretty good prime-time slate

SERIES DEBUTS | You say you like a drama where aliens imperil planet Earth? Well, brace yourself for ABC's "Invasion," CBS' "Threshold" and NBC's "Surface."

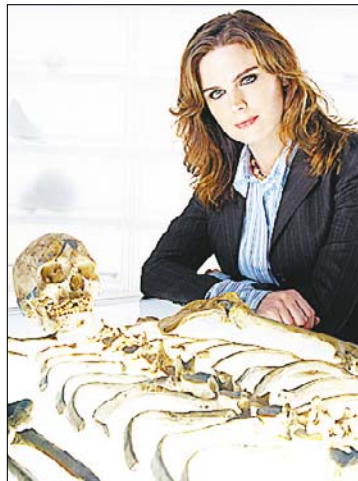

Or maybe you identify with women torn between career and family — look for "Ghost Whisperers" and "Close to Home" from CBS.

Chefs cook up comedy on both "Freddie" (ABC) and "Kitchen Confidential" (Fox). Lawmen mourn colleagues killed in the line of duty on "Criminal Minds" (CBS) and "Killer Instinct" (Fox).

In short, when you take a look at the networks' new fall shows, patterns begin to reveal themselves.

Despite an overall lack of fresh ideas, the fall crop should have its pleasures. Consider two engaging comedy-dramas that adhere to this pattern: oddball lawyers who defend their underdog clients and each other's eccentricities.

On Fox's "Head Cases," Chris O'Donnell plays Payne, a slick L.A. lawyer who has a nervous breakdown. When he's ready to return to work, his old law firm doesn't want him. Who does? Shulz (Adam Goldberg), an impetuous slob with an anger problem who's paired with Payne by their psych therapist.

The mismatched attorneys of WB's "Just Legal" are a geekish teen prodigy (Jay Baruchel) and a courtroom burnout (Don Johnson) who finds his passion for the law is reignited by this gung-ho junior partner.

Some other new dramas worth

checking out:

Fox's "Prison Break" depicts the complex social order at a state penitentiary where one of the inmates has gotten himself jailed in order to rescue his brother. A nutty concept for a show? You bet. But its appeal is in its (pardon the term) execution.

The mystery-melodrama "Reunion" employs a shrewd time scheme: Six friends graduate from high school in the summer of 1986. But the premiere leaps forward to 2005's funeral service for one of the group, brutally murdered. But who? Each weekly episode will find the gang a year closer to the present.

Of the three new procedural crime dramas, Fox's "Bones" stands out thanks to its star, Emily Deschanel, who plays a headstrong forensic anthropologist saddled with a handsome FBI agent (David Boreanaz).

And it reaffirms a TV truism every viewer understands: Anything abandoned long enough can seem fresh. FRAZIER MOORE (AP)

A Virtual Dog's Life

The good gamer has to promise to look after his Nintendog

VIDEO GAMES | From DigiMon to Tamagotchi, there are dozens of choices for the virtual pet lover. The latest, "Nintendogs" ($30), debuts in the United States this week, exclusively for the Nintendo DS handheld game machine.

"Nintendogs" is a lifelike digital rendering of perhaps the most universally admired of all domestic animals: puppies.

It's a superb example of just how interactive the DS can be with its microphone, built-in wireless and two screens — one of them touch sensitive.

Obtaining a pet starts with a visit to the kennel, where the gamer can select among several breeds.

The dogs are shown in 3-D and do an amazing job of mimicking the real thing: they'll sniff around, pant and bark when excited.

You can "rub" your pet by stroking it on the bottom screen, or teach it tricks by speaking into the microphone, then reward your dog with a rub on the back or behind the ear.

The dog we "adopted" to play the game has mastered only the basics so far, including "sit," "lie down" and "shake."

"Nintendogs" is real time, so it's important to frequently check on your pup. Neglect Huggy for two days and you'll return to find him thirsty, hungry and in no mood to play.

After only a few weeks, you may find you've formed an emotional attachment with your pixelated pup.

It's this sort of bonding that ultimately makes "Nintendogs" the perfect test run for families considering a real dog — or anyone uncomfortable with the thought of pet dander, pooper scoopers and veterinarian visits.

"Nintendogs" certainly won't replace our love and devotion for flesh-and-blood creatures — but it's paws-down the cutest virtual pet this video-game reviewer has ever cared for. MATT SLAGLE (AP)

Godfather Of Techno Moog Dies

APPRECIATION | Robert A. Moog, whose synthesizers turned electric currents into sound, has died. He was 71.

As a Ph.D. student in engineering physics, Moog in 1964 developed his first synthesizer modules with composer Herbert Deutsch. They allowed musicians to generate a range of sounds that could mimic nature or seem otherworldly. Synthesizers developed since Moog's breakthrough have inspired elements of rock, funk, hip-hop and techno.

His instrument business, Moog Music, attracted customers that included Nine Inch Nails, Pearl Jam, Beck, Phish, Sonic Youth and Widespread Panic. NATALIE GOTT (AP)

A new programming block for tykes and a cautionary special

NICHE MARKETING | Tickle U, Cartoon Network's new programming block for preschool children (weekdays, 9-11 a.m.), begins this week with a lineup of original animated series, computer-image hosts and the "Mommy Bar," a graphic feature that gives parents and caregivers programming information.

Tickle U promises programs "designed specifically to help preschoolers learn to have a sense of humor about life." They include Kids exposed to garden gnomes in youth grow up to be tacky landscapers.

"Gordon the Garden Gnome," "Harry and His Bucket Full of Dinosaurs" and a revival of long-ago favorite "Gerald McBoing Boing," based on the Dr. Seuss character.

On the other end of the spectrum, G4, the cable network dedicated to video games, takes a hard look at the issue of "Sex in Games: A G4 Special Report" (11 p.m.).

The program explores how sexuality is used in games and cites both early examples from the first Atari console as well as the current "Hot Coffee" content on "Grand Theft Auto: San Andreas."

Then, in a specially convened forum, political pundits, retailers, game developers and concerned parents sound off on the subject.

Getting prescriptions filled just became less of a headache

The lines at most pharmacies have gotten so frustratingly long in recent years that some people may want a Valium by the time they reach the counter.

But in this day of self-serve gas pumps and airline ticket dispensers, a solution could be at hand. Two companies have begun to install automated drug-dispensing machines, which look and operate like ATMs, in a few California stores.

If customers take to the process, the machines may become increasingly commonplace.

To get their medication, consumers simply enter identifying information on a touch screen and swipe a credit card to pay for the prescription (there is no service fee). The medication — already bagged — slides down a chute. For now, the automated machines can dispense only refills, by order of the California State Board of Pharmacy.

"It's well-recognized that there is a shortage of pharmacists and the whole system is being taxed," said Bill Holmes, president and chief executive of Distributed Delivery Networks Corp. in San Marcos, Calif., the maker of one automated system. "But wherever there is a labor shortage, there is an automation solution."

Few consumers would disagree the lines to pick up medications have grown.

An ATM for Drugs

Although more people today have prescription drug insurance, questions about coverage and copays can slow the pace of the pick-up line — as have recent laws requiring pharmacists to offer consultations to patients receiving new prescriptions.

Pharmacies too have felt the pressures, hence their willingness to test the automated drug dispensers.

California's first automated dispensers were recently installed in stores in the San Diego area.

The machines, which can hold hundreds of prescriptions, may prove to be of greatest value to consumers who want to pick up their prescriptions after the pharmacy has closed.

But John A. Cronin, senior vice president of the California Pharmacists Association, has his concerns. "What concerns us is the use of this kind of technology would tend to decrease the interaction between the pharmacist and the consumer."

"There is a place for these machines," he said. "We're not going to be able to suppress technological advances like this. But there needs to be a thought process about what the total impact will be on the consumer."

Music to Students' Ears

Education

Campuses offer free tunes, hoping to deter illegal downloads

As a college freshman, Will Mount feasted on the free but mostly illegal music available through online file-sharing software such as Kazaa.

Now a senior, Mount has seen his free music fix become legal, thanks to an initiative by American University, to dissuade students from using its computer network to illegally swap music online.

If the music industry only had more like Mount. Many students still prefer to plumb file-sharing networks, despite efforts to make legal music available on campuses for free.

Shifting from the file-sharing free-for-all to a licensed music service largely has been positive for Mount, but he can understand why some students shun it. For instance, he can't transfer the songs to his iPod music player.

AUTHORIZED ACCESS: Student Will Mount still gets his music for free, and it's legal.

"If you want to get the music in your iPod, you have to go to other places to buy it," said Mount, 21, an Ohio native. "Or you are going to have to do something illegal to get it."

Limited song selection and other restrictions also are factors.

American University is one of about 50 colleges that have begun providing students with a legal means to get music online through services like Rhapsody,

“If you want to get the music in your iPod, you have to go to other places to buy it. Or you are going to have to do something illegal to get it.”

Ruckus, Cdigix and the now-legal version of Napster.

In many cases, services that can cost as much as $15 a month to the general public are being funded through existing technology budgets or student activities fees.

But American estimates that only about half of the 3,800 eligible students actually used the Ruckus service last spring, despite having an anonymous benefactor cover the subscription costs. (It's switching to Napster this fall and will start using student fees.)

Legal services typically offer some 1.2 million tracks, but limit how and where the songs can be heard — often requiring that students stay at their desks. Getting songs to transfer to digital players costs extra.

Market research conducted by American University found that a key stumbling block was the inability to move music from Ruckus to their players, including the market-leading iPod.

"The complaints were you couldn't burn music for free, you couldn't put it on iPods," said Bill Raduchel, chief executive for Ruckus, which provides music to more than a dozen universities. "No legal service is going to meet that need."

Cary Sherman, president of the Recording Industry Association of America, said the response to the legal services shows that universities also need to employ technical measures to block file-swapping of copyrighted music. ALEX VEIGA (AP)

Supplies to Demand

↑ It's not just a stapler. It's what staplers dream of becoming. The SWISS BUSINESS TOOL ($95, wengerna.com) contains a stapler, staple remover, hole punch, knife and scissors. It's the ultimate weapon for the organized teacher, student or staple freak.

→ Relive the charming days of walking to school with your books bound together by a strap. The CASE IT BOOK SLING ($20, caseit.com) is a one-strap backpack with a space for a cellphone or MP3 player; its open design prevents you from sneaking that copy of Judy Blume's "Forever" into the weekly meeting.

↑ Law school students, rejoice! When two office supplies come together, their union can produce amazing things. The marriage of Post-Its and highlighters has spawned the POST-IT FLAG HIGHLIGHTER ($5 for three, Staples). Information has nowhere to hide now.

↓ Pocket protectors are for losers. Cool people use SHARPIE MINIS ($10 for a dozen, Staples). The clip-on caps attach them to keychains, backpacks and lanyards; assorted colors mean brainstorming is no longer limited to black and white.

→ Everyone likes a pat on the back, especially when it's wrapped around graphite. These DIXON TICONDEROGA TEACHER REWARD PENCILS ($4 a dozen, Office Depot) will put a smile on anyone's face.

↑ Numbers are hard. But the WORDLOCK ($6, Staples) makes remembering your combination easy. Choose from over 1,000 four- or five-letter words, but please, don't choose your name.

Romance

Sending a Severed Ear Is So Last Year

Trying to find something nice to send to that someone special? Flowers and candy are too cliché, while a singing guy wearing a gorilla suit is so offbeat it's scary. Split the difference between boring and bizarre with a SATIN SHEET-A-GRAM (satin sheetagram.com). Sizes range from twin for $39 (although why one would need satin sheets on a twin bed is beyond us) to California king sets for $69, and they fit mattresses up to 10 inches deep; 16 colors are available, as are three sizes of pillowcases. Because, really, nothing says "I love you" like slippery bedclothing. KRISTEN PAGE-KIRBY (EXPRESS)

As the Kansas School Board debated this summer whether state schools should teach the theory of intelligent design in addition to evolution, one Bobby Henderson drafted an open letter demanding that Kansas schools also teach that the Flying Spaghetti Monster (FSM) created the universe. Such was an Internet phenomenon born—and where there's an Internet phenomenon, there's merchandise! Many attractive and amusing (though perhaps not the latter if you're pro-ID) FLYING SPAGHETTI MONSTER T-SHIRTS are available at cafepress.com/venganza, including the "Touched by His Noodly Appendage" take on Michelangelo's Birth of Adam, above, and an "I Want to Believe" parody of Agent Mulder's famous poster. ## Chat House

Post sports columnist MICHAEL WILBON was online Monday to discuss steroids, the Nationals and the Washington Redskins | washingtonpost.com/liveonline

I have been a big fan of Patrick Ramsey but slowly I am losing faith. How realistic is it that the rookie will get a legit chance to play this year? Do we have to have at least one injury at the QB position?

Don't expect me to ever endorse rooting for a quarterback to get hurt so that your favorite guy gets to play. I don't go there. But I do think Patrick Ramsey will be on a short leash this fall, that he has about six weeks to show what he can do before Gibbs goes to Brunell. Do I expect to see Jason Campbell in his rookie season? Perhaps. Week 10? Maybe? We can only guess.

How much credence should be put in the persistent rumors that there are additional MLB positive steroid test results in the pipeline, involving some well-known names?

I asked [baseball commissioner] Bud Selig that direct question two weeks ago on "PTI" ["Pardon the Interruption" on ESPN]. He said he had heard the same rumors and inquired with the league's drug testing people but that no swarm of positive tests was forthcoming. Still, the rumors persist even now. I don't know what to think, really. How could we know if the commissioner — and I believe Bud on this — doesn't even know yet?

Will Frank Robinson be manager of the year in the NL? Do you think the Nats will be in the playoff hunt 'til the end?

I've said for six weeks I think the Nats will hang in until the end, and that (for me) would make Frank Robby one of the leaders in the Manager of the Year voting. If the Nats get in, put me down for an F. Robby vote. How can you not when his team has the worst offense in baseball, when the team spent no money on salaries relative to the other contenders, when the team is owned by baseball and not real owners. F. Robby has done a pretty damn good job overall, a great job under the circumstances if the Nats hang in there.

Did Dan Snyder yank your seat, too?
Uh, no. I pay for my own seats, two of them, on the club level. Yank them? I don't think so.

Behind the Gaza Pullout

I JUST WANTED to point out a few things that Express has neglected to mention during its coverage of the Israeli pullout of Gaza. The first is a distinction that Americans rarely make, but one that is important when on the ground: All Arabs are not Muslims, all Palestinians are not Arabs and all Israelis are not Jews. In this case, the fighting is between Israelis and Palestinians — the political/national entities, not the religions, however much it might make better news coverage.

The second is a rather important point regarding international law. Under the Geneva Convention, and affirmed by subsequent U.N. Security Council resolutions (in which the U.S. took part), the acquisition of land during war does not give a country legitimacy over that territory. In other words, the settlements, because they were the result of war, are illegal. In all of your coverage, you have yet to mention this fact.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your perceptions will lead you astray, whether or not they are accurate. You may be interpreting things a little too freely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Once you get moving, you won't want to hesitate for any reason. A time will come later on when you'll want to slow down.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Someone who considers you aloof and standoffish may be surprised by your sudden interest in his or her private affairs. Don't intrude.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You can breathe life into a project that has been lying dormant for some time. Success can be yours if you play your cards right.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You don't want anyone to rein you in, but in exchange, be willing to practice just a little more self-control.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You may have some difficulty expressing yourself as honestly as you would wish. Some of what you have to say is not easy.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Don't take too many liberties: play by the rules. Let those in control remain in control until your turn has really come.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Don't be so critical of those around you, unless you are willing to be the subject of some close and biting criticism yourself.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Make use of any time that is not taken up with official business, and be sure that you aren't letting a social opportunity pass you by.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) What is most desirable to you may also prove to be most dangerous. Don't give up too much too soon.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You may be tempted to throw caution to the wind, but you are hereby advised to think twice, especially where romance is concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be more demonstrative with your emotions, and be prepared to ask for what you want. Evening brings a chance for change.

Former Beefcake Gets A Prize for Meatlessness

ALEC BALDWIN will receive the Linda McCartney Memorial Award at PETA's 25th anniversary gala in Hollywood, Calif., on Sept. 10. Two years ago, Baldwin narrated a short documentary, "Meet Your Meat," for PETA. The animal rights group said the video helped persuade Burger King to sever its ties to slaughterhouses that fail unannounced audits and to lend support to the Humane Slaughter Act. At the time, Baldwin said the video "makes the case for Americans to adopt a vegetarian diet and enact humane legislation to weed out the worst abuses." Former recipients include Pamela Anderson. Coast Guard officer Nathan Henise said Monday that McDermott was last seen on the fishing vessel. "We're treating it as a missing person case," Henise said. ## METHOD ACTING

Lee Strasberg Is So Totally Offended

JOAQUIN PHOENIX denied tabloid reports that he had a breakdown while filming the upcoming Johnny Cash biopic. Phoenix banged his head on a bedpost during a scene related to Cash's brother's death, prompting speculation that he was reacting to the 1993 death of his brother, River. The actor tells Newsweek he was just trying to get into the emotional state of his character. Suggesting that he'd use his personal life for "Walk the Line," said Phoenix, "kind of makes me sick." "I don't need to pull from my experience for a character, and I've never understood why actors would, except for lack of ability, imagination or research," he said. "I had all three things, so this is a little frustrating to me." (AP)

Joaquin will start his own school of acting to further deny his emotions.

CASTING

If Only Washington Were So Charismatic

JANEANE GAROFALO will guest star as a controversial media strategist on NBC's "The West Wing" this fall. Garofalo's character, Louise Thornton, is hired by Democratic Congressman Matt Santos (Jimmy Smits) as the new director of communications for his presidential campaign. She urges Josh Lyman (Bradley Whitford) and the other staffers to stop playing politics and start concentrating on connecting with the electorate. Her first appearance is expected to air Oct. 2, NBC said in a statement. The new season of "The West Wing" will premiere Sept. 25. (AP)

▼ GIVE US

- ◆ 30 minutes, twice a week on your own
- ◆ A longer group run each weekend
- ◆ Your fundraising efforts
- ◆ Your dedication and commitment

▼ YOU GET

- ◆ A six-month training program that will prepare you to complete a marathon or half marathon
- ◆ Great coaching, support, and camaraderie
- ◆ Roundtrip air travel and hotel accommodations in the French Quarter of New Orleans
- ◆ Free entry to the marathon
- ◆ The official marathon shirt
- ◆ The official marathon medal
- ◆ The joy and satisfaction that comes from knowing you are a hero to people with AIDS
- ◆ New friends and memories that will last a lifetime
- ◆ Bragging rights for accomplishing something others only dream about

A Training Program For Everyone

Our training programs are geared to both beginners and experienced runners. The full marathon program starts with three miles of running and walking, and gradually increases in distance each week. The half marathon program starts with just one mile. Many of our participants are first-time marathoners, and some have never run a step in their lives. But 98% of those who complete the program go on to complete the marathon.

Each weekend, you'll train with your "pace group" – other runners who share your same level of conditioning, whether fast or slow. It's a great way to get fit, have fun, and make a tremendous difference in the fight to end AIDS. It may be the best thing you do this year, and your life will never be the same.
